SITUATION SUMMARY

Hurricane Odile, Eastern Pacific Ocean

Hurricane Odile was downgraded to a very high end Category 1 hurricane on 9/15/14, 12 hours after making landfall at the tip of the Baja California peninsula. Odile is expected to be downgraded to a tropical storm by this morning. According to the Servicio Meteorológico Nacional (Mexico's government weather service), strong torrential rains are expected in Baja California, Sonora, Nayarit, Jalisco, Durango, Colima, Chihuahua and Michoacan over the next several days.

- The main impacts for Mexico will be prolonged heavy rainfall, gusty winds, and flash flooding over the next 48 hours. Estimates are in excess of 5 inches for a large portion of Baja California and coastal Sonora Mexico south of Puerto Penasco.
- The storm track is farther east than Norbert was and is not expected to bring significant hazards to CA.
- California will remain outside the primary threat area for this system. While showers and thunderstorms are forecast for much of southeast CA and the southern Sierra, amounts are not expected to exceed 0.75 inches but isolated heavier amounts in excess of an inch are possible in the most intense storms.

Cal OES Southern Activity

There is a potential for extremely heavy rains and thundershowers from the remnants of Hurricane Odile. The National Weather Service, Southern Region and southern Operational Areas are monitoring the storm closely and are prepared to take any necessary action.

The following information has been received from Cal OES Southern Region, Operational Area Representatives:

Imperial County - Imperial is monitoring the weather and expect to be able to handle any activities that may need addressing.

San Diego -San Diego is monitoring NWS and is working with their County Flood Control specialists (they have a staffer, Allen Rand, which takes the NWS information and makes localized predictions for them). They have no other current activity but this may change depending on what happens in the next day or so. They have burn areas they are monitoring.

Inyo - Inyo had not heard that the OA might be getting rougher weather. Today's presentation was sent to Kelley Williams. They are looking forward to tomorrow's forecast out of Reno, which they will use for planning and preparation. They will keep us apprised of any unmet needs.

Orange - Orange County is meeting with county agencies this afternoon to strategize recent burn area vulnerabilities in the Silverado Canyon area. Other preparatory measures may be recommended at the meeting.

San Bernardino - The county is prepared with pre-positioning of resources as well as prepared to hold conference calls with impacted agencies as necessary.

Riverside - The county is pre-positioning sand bags at Fire Stations and monitoring weather and keeping their cities informed of any updates to the weather pattern.

Southern Region continues to reach out to the OA's for updates as the storm approaches. The Southern REOC has prepared a staffing pattern should the need arise to activate.

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

ACTIVE WEATHER WARNINGS, WATCHES and ADVISORIES:

- http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www_bc_cal.php

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

An approaching low pressure system over the eastern Pacific will bring a chance for rain showers Wednesday through Thursday. Warm and dry weather will return over the weekend as high pressure builds over northern California.

San Francisco Weather:

A gradual cooling trend will continue over inland areas today ahead of an approaching trough. This system will bring a chance of showers to our area late Wednesday into Thursday. Shower chances then end and temperatures rebound for the upcoming weekend.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

Temperatures will cool to below normal later this week with a chance of showers and thunderstorms returning to the region later on Wednesday into Thursday.

Hanford Weather:

High pressure over the region will give way to an approaching low pressure system. Temperatures will fall to near normal for the latter part of the week with a slight chance of mountain and desert thunderstorms Wednesday through Friday.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

A ridge of high pressure and weak onshore flow will result in very hot weather through midweek, especially for areas away from the immediate coast. There is a slight chance of thunderstorms for midweek due to remnant moisture from Hurricane Odile, mainly for mountains and deserts. Temperatures will return to near normal late in the week as a trough of low pressure approaches from the west.

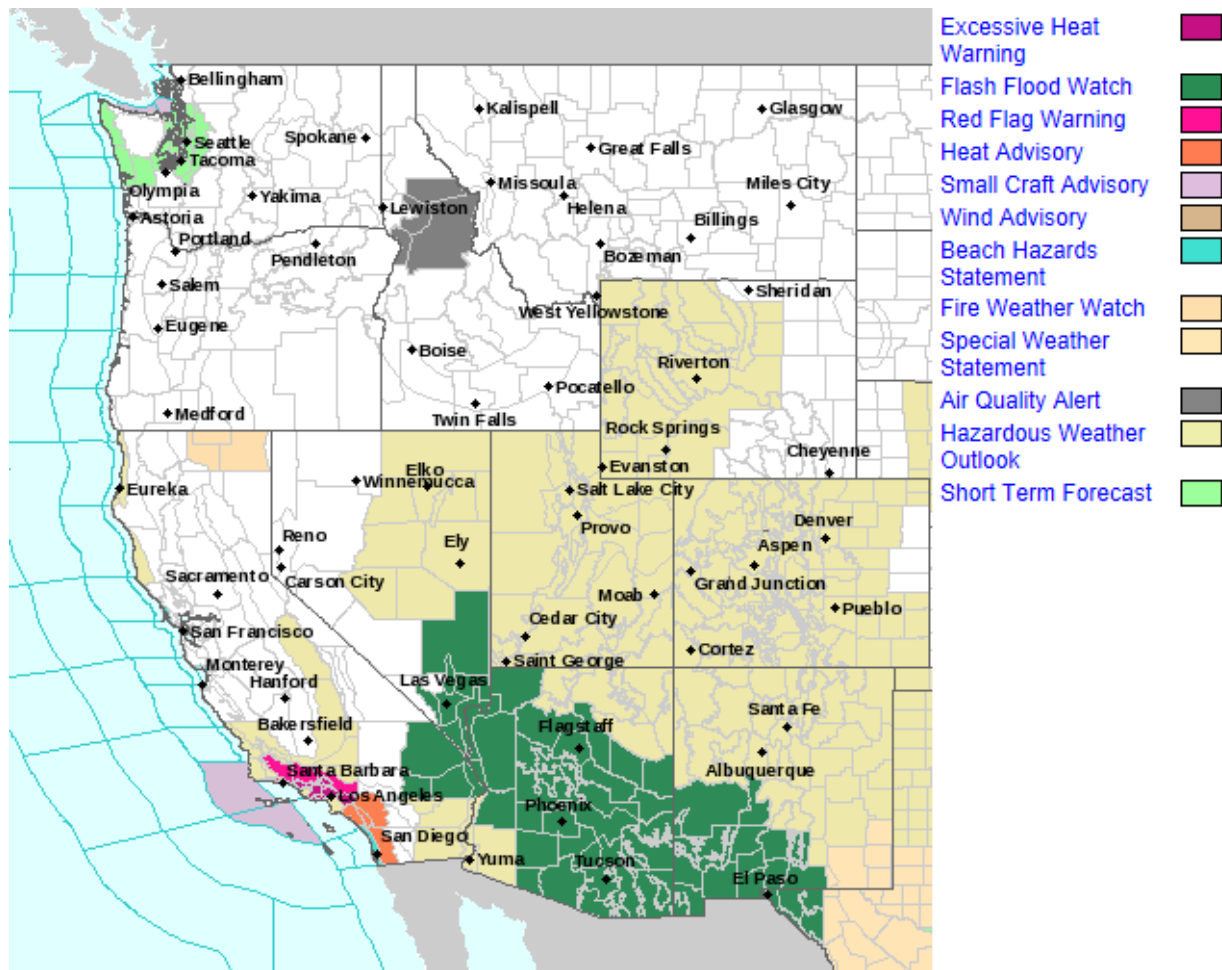

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Moisture from Tropical Storm Odile will continue to spread northward through Wednesday elevating the chance for showers and thunderstorms across southern California. Some of the storms may produce heavy rainfall and there will be a threat of flash flooding, mainly during the afternoon and evenings near the mountains. There will not be much relief from the heat and humidity until Thursday when a trough of low pressure brings cooling and drying from the northwest. Isolated showers and thunderstorms are possible into Friday over the mountains and deserts, and then partly cloudy weather with much more seasonal temperatures for the upcoming weekend.

Southeast California Weather:

Moisture will continue to increase across the area today as Tropical Storm Odile approaches the region. There will be an elevated risk of heavy rain and flooding across the area through late week before drier air returns by the weekend.
